Insuring your life is an important matter. Like getting married, it demands careful consideration, and may cover a long period. You want the best there is. "Your insurance policy, which is more than likely to be all you can leave your family, and perhaps all you will have for your own old age, must be absolutely right. You can take a chance in less vital affairs, but there must be no experimenting here. Insurance companies differ as widely as men. Companies are not all alike-only the agent of the inferior concern tells you that. And you want behind your contract all the business experience and financial strength obtainable-don't you?-and then such profit, or, conversely, as reasonable a final cost, as is consistent with these things. Very well, then. You will find all these qualities exemplified to their highest degree in the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York.

The Mutual Life is the oldest, strongest and most economically-managed company of its kind in this country.

It has the longest and broadest business experience. It began active work first. It had to invent modern life insurance, at least so far as the United States was concerned, and has led in its development ever since. It has paid many millions of dollars more to policyholders and their beneficiaries than any other company. It holds a larger margin of assets in excess of policy liabilities, for the protection of its policyholders, than any other company. It does no industrial or sub-standard business, is and always has been purely mutual, has no stockholders except its policy-holders, issues only participating policies containing every app oved privilege of liberality-and these only on carefully-selected risks-and is increasing its annual dividends to policyholders at a rate never parallelled elsewhere.

If you want absolutely the best there is in life insurance, you will find it here.

Whatever your needs, if they embrace safe and desirable policies, founded on the arithmetic rather than imagination, I can meet them. And remember this: any policy which the Mutual Life, with its unexcelled experience and strength, does not feel justified in writing, is a mighty good thing to leave alone.

Reflect on this also:

Some day just ahead will find you either with a pulseless heart, or else too old to work and not quite old enough to die. Dead, your family will need a handful of coin now and then. Living, you will need an income that you cannot earn. This is sane talk-true of everybody, true of you. Let me tell you what we can do to bridge the days of want that surely lie in wait for your family and yourself.

Do it now. "Tomorrow is a sharper that sets his penury against thy plenty." Ponder on these proverbs: "Yesterday is a dream, tomorrow a vision. Cut your watermelons today." "He that's coy when fortune's kind shall after seek and fail to find." "What can't be cured can't be insured."

Now and not hereafter, while your mind is on it and the breath of life is in you, telephone or write me and ask me to figure a policy for your special case. I may not be in, Lat the office will be open, they'll find me and I'll find you.

If you knew that by washing in these waters you could be relieved from that awful itch, wouldn't you make every effort to take a trip to Europe at once? Would you not be willing to spend your last cent to find the cure?

But you need not leave home for these distant springs. Relief is right here in your own home town!

A simple wash of Oil of Wintergreen. Thymol and other ingredients as compounded only in D. D. D. Prescription will bring instant relief to that terrible burning itch, and leave the skin as smooth and healthy as that of a child.
